

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN FOR MISS FOURQUEAN

Home of Bride-to-Be at Highland Park Is Scene of Enjoyable Party.

WEDDING OF MISS POLLARD

Daughter of C. T. Pollard, of Walker, Becomes Bride of Dr. Marshall Tate Vaden, of Gretna—Motor Trips Continue Popular.

One of the prettiest events of the late summer season was the surprise miscellaneous shower given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. M. F. James, Mrs. Walter Leighton, of Atlanta, and Miss Ethel Barry, of St. Louis, in honor of Miss Martha Fourquean, whose marriage is to be celebrated shortly. The affair took place at the Fourquean home on Fourquean's Lane, Highland Park, and about thirty friends of the guest of honor were present. The bride-to-be was showered with dainty gifts. The decorations were entirely in yellow and white. The punch bowl was festooned in red and purple grapes, and the parlors were decorated throughout in vases of garden flowers. A portion of the lawn surrounding the house was arranged for the reception of the guests, and palms and growing plants formed an effective background for the pretty summer frocks of those in attendance.

Vaden-Pollard.
A quiet wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the residence of the bride's cousin, Mrs. Clarence E. Lackland, 1013 West Grace Street, when Miss Ellen Byrd Pollard, daughter of C. T. Pollard, of Walker, formerly of this city, was married to Dr. Marshall Tate Vaden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Giles H. Vaden, of Gretna. The ceremony, although of wide interest, was quietly celebrated, Rev. George Kemper officiating, in the presence of only a few relatives.

Dr. and Mrs. Vaden left immediately afterward for Fairfield, where they will make their future home.

AMUSEMENTS

Speedy Bill at Lyric.
Again the Lyric spreads itself with one of those shows in which even the weakest spots are strong enough to hold. So far as popular approval indicated last night, picking the headliner is purely a matter of the personal equation. There is variety enough to leave two or three bills. So we'll just take the acts in order.

Bob Kipp and the Cornells begin with patter, proceed to difficult tumbling, come back to near-singing and close with acrobatic dancing, and score a decided hit in each. In addition to their singular versatility, one of the duo is a born comedian. And theirs is the opening act.

Next come Robie and Robie, "those girls." One is a sort of sourette and the other is another sort of sourette, the other sort, either Robie or Robie, is one of the cleverest "tough" girls seen at the Lyric in months. These girls are good enough for almost any spot on the bill.

An uncommonly good musical act is presented by the Wherry Lewis Quartet, a man and three women. One of the women is a singer, another plays the piano and another the cello, while the man is a violinist. The violinist is a technician of no mean ability; if he plays a bit sharp, it is doubtless because of the brilliant tone that will carry over the sound of the street cars and wide-open mufflers of passing automobiles and motorcycles. The pianist is evidently an artist.

One of the Four Slickers makes the act the knockout noise of the show. The house wouldn't let him go last night, and he is back here with the comedy until the lights flicker. It was all "hokus," but clever at that.

If the Five Belmonts, who close the show, are "internationally famous," it is no more than their due. For they are the fastest, most graceful, most accurate, most dexterous, most kaleidoscopic and generally superlative hoop and diabolo jugglers that ever out-paced the Chinese and Japanese. The act alone is worth the proverbial price of admission.

And every act moves rapidly, so that the whole show is speedy. D. G.

Colonia's Film Adaptation.
Cosmo Hamilton's well-known novel and play, "The Blindness of Virtue," will be seen in film form at the Colonia to-day and to-morrow, with Edna Mayo in the principal role. As this play was endorsed by many social workers when it was produced on the stage, it is fair to assume that the picture will treat of subjects that are not commonly referred to in the home circle. In fact, the management of the house stresses the fact that it is a "moral play."

Little Theater's Grown-Up Picture.
For the latter part of the week the Little Theater's Paramount picture is a screen version of Agnes and Egerton Castle's novel, "The Secret Orchard." While the French duke's heredity and consequent weakness—to put it mildly—are not brought out in the photoplay, this burden is shifted, in a prologue, to the shoulders of the girl in the story. This, of course, is for the purpose of increasing the importance of Blanche Sweet's part. The picture is particularly well acted, and the production is beautiful. It is like "Sold," strictly for grown-ups.

"Scandal" at Superior.
For the rest of the week the Superior's attraction will continue to be the sensational photoplay, "Scandal." Dealing with the evils of idle or malicious gossip, this photoplay not only has considerable value, but is also interesting merely as a play, because of its well-developed plot and its series of logical incidents.

Boys Leaves Home.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LYNCHBURG, VA., August 25.—Nelson Goff, a ten-year-old boy, has disappeared from his home near Rustburg, and his parents are greatly disturbed as to his whereabouts. The boy has been missing since Sunday. He was last seen on Sunday evening in Rustburg with a small grip in his hand.

COVINGTON IS LAVISH WITH ITS HOSPITALITY
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
COVINGTON, VA., August 25.—Covington's entertainment of the Virginia State Firemen's Association would convince any one that the keys of the town have been turned over to the visitors. The trip to the mountains has been a treat to all. The parade of the firemen to-day showed over 500 in line. Harrisonburg, with ninety men, took first prize for the largest number of men in line. Covington and Alexandria tied for second prize with eighty men each. Next year's convention goes to Harrisonburg. The real races to-morrow promise to be hotly contested by seven teams. Thousands of people have thronged the street, and the crowd seems to be getting larger.

A brown satin redingote costume is bordered with moulton and has vestee of white organdie.

The combination of fur and satin will be much in evidence as the fall season approaches. In many instances the hem of the skirt or coat is fur bordered, while collar and cuffs of some soft felt is accepted quite as a matter of course.

Americans Should Exercise Caution

Friction With Germany Unnecessary If Citizens Stay Out of Danger, View of Martin

ROANOKE, VA., August 24.—Thomas S. Martin, senior United States Senator from Virginia, stopped over in this city for a few hours this morning. Senator Martin came here to meet the members of his family, who have been at Mountain Lake. The party left later in the day for Charlottesville.

Speaking of the German crisis, Senator Martin said: "There are many things a man or government can do for which ample justification can be found, but which are wholly unnecessary."

The United States, he pointed out, probably would be perfectly justifiable in severing diplomatic relations or even in declaring hostilities against Germany because of what apparently is a persistent disregard of American claims for protection of noncombatants, but it would not be necessary, particularly if Americans would cease placing themselves aboard vessels under foreign flags and in position to be made subjects of submarine attacks.
